STEPS ON BACK!

Create groups or have students select their own groups. Allow them to choose topics from a list of possible project ideas.

Next, have group members sit together. Distribute one piece of paper and sticky notes to each group.

Instruct each student to write down things that NEED to be done to complete their project on the sticky notes. One idea per sticky note, but there's no limit to the number of notes used!

Have groups organize the stickies, grouping them by patterns, duplicates, and themes. Instruct students to explore what the sticky notes reveal and to note any gaps such as action items that were missed.

Once all the pieces of the project are laid out for everyone to see, have each group decide what materials they will need, what their timeline is, and who will do what.

Have group members exchange contact information, decide what the main form of group communication will be, and set their next meeting date!
